Work in Progress

Répondre pour autrui : comparer les déclarations au sein des familles. with Mathieu Ferry and Mathieu Ichou. Chapter in Trajectoires et Origines 2 book. Forthcoming.

- Can adult children accurately answer questions about their (grand-)parents’ place of birth? And can parents report accurate information about their children’s educational attainment? We answer these questions and mention their consequences on ascription to a migration background and social mobility estimates.

Growing up Disillusioned? Unmet Educational Expectations and Perceived Discrimination among Minority Youth in Spain. with Lucas Drouhot, Meta van der Linden and Frank van Tubergen. R&R at International Migration Review.

- To what extent disappointed educational expectations lead to perceived discrimination? We examine the role of mismatches and parental socialization to understand discrimination perceptions among minority youth in Spain.

Am I Also Discriminated? Discrimination Awareness Spillover or Switching Effects. with Merlin Schaeffer. Under review at Social Psychology Quarterly.

- How does exposure to information on discrimination foster discrimination perceptions across groups and discrimination grounds? We investigate how increasing the salience of ethno-racial (resp. gender) discrimination feeds discrimination perceptions among ethno-racial minority men and women.

Diverging Meanings? Societal discrimination perceptions among advantaged and disadvantaged groups. with Nella Geurts. Work in progress.

- How does manipulating ingroup and outgroup discrimination salience foster discrimination perceptions?
